A quick-start toolkit for small businesses and local creators

What Local Feeds Is

Local Feeds is a location-based discovery feed for users 18 and older, showing content tied to travel, events, restaurants, shopping, and posts from small businesses and nearby creators. Posts surface based on location, topic, and recency, which means a business or creator can be discovered by someone two blocks away without spending anything on ads.

Why It's Worth Your Time

- It's a free discovery channel. Local Feeds surfaces content based on proximity and relevance, not ad spend.
- It rewards consistency over production value. A short, honest video of what's happening today outperforms a polished ad here.
- It's opt-in on the viewer's side, which means the people seeing your content actually chose to see what's nearby.

5 Tips To Get Featured

- ☐ Location-tag every relevant post. This is the single biggest factor. If you skip it, you're invisible to Local Feeds entirely.
- ☐ Post about today, not last month. Recency matters here more than in the main feed. Time-sensitive content (today's menu, tonight's event) performs best.
- ☐ Show the real place. Behind-the-scenes, venue tours, and “what it actually looks like right now” content builds more trust than staged shots.
- ☐ Keep a consistent posting habit. One post a month won't build a Local Feeds presence. Aim for a few posts a week if you can.
- ☐ Brief anyone posting on your behalf, staff, partners, or creator collaborators, to tag location every time, not just occasionally.

Content Ideas Checklist

- ☐ Today's specials, drops, or limited availability
- ☐ A 15-second “what's happening right now” walkthrough
- ☐ Event announcements (pop-ups, classes, tastings, sales)
- ☐ A regular customer or neighbor shoutout
- ☐ Behind-the-scenes of prep, setup, or a normal workday
- ☐ A simple “why we're here” or neighborhood-love post

For Local Creators Specifically

If you're a creator rather than a business, Local Feeds is a chance to become the go-to voice for your neighborhood instead of competing in the broader For You feed. Consider a recurring local series (a weekly “what's new near me” roundup, a regular spot check-in) so viewers start to expect and seek out your content specifically.
