

Wear Your Truth

A self-love campaign concept built around the Soft Pinch shade names

Campaign Brief

Brand	Rare Beauty — Soft Pinch Liquid & Powder Blush
Goal	+30% sales lift, driven by deeper emotional brand connection
Audience	Gen Z / young millennial women already engaged with self-love and mental health content
Budget (assumed)	$15,000 over 8 weeks
Core insight	Rare Beauty's shade names (Joy, Hope, Grateful, Truth...) are already emotionally coded — nobody is using that on purpose

The Big Idea

Instead of choosing a blush shade for skin tone, you choose it for the emotion you want to carry that day. “Wear Your Truth” turns the existing shade names — Joy, Happy, Grateful, Hope, Encourage, Truth, Faith, Love — into a small daily self-love ritual, reframing a 30-second makeup step as an act of intention.

This builds directly on Rare Beauty's existing mental-health-forward identity (1% of sales already supports the Rare Impact Fund), so the campaign deepens the brand's real positioning rather than bolting on a new message.

Strategy & Channels

- Interactive shade quiz — “What are you feeling today?” matches users to a shade + affirmation, driving product discovery and email capture.
- “Shade of the Day” social series — recurring IG/TikTok content pairing a shade with a mood and a one-line affirmation.
- #WearYourTruth UGC challenge — users share which shade they wore and why; lower cost, higher trust than paid ads alone.
- Micro-influencer seeding — partners in the self-care / mental health space post authentic “why I wear this shade” content.
- Gifting tie-in — affirmation cards bundled with shade sets for holiday/self-care gifting occasions.

Execution: What Was Built

Two deliverables were prototyped for this concept:

- An interactive, clickable shade-matching quiz (3 questions → shade + affirmation reveal, with a shop CTA) — see “rare-beauty-shade-quiz.html”.
- A set of “Shade of the Day” social post mockups plus sample #WearYourTruth UGC cards — see “rare-beauty-social-mockups.html”.

Timeline

Weeks	Phase	Focus
-------	-------	-------

1–2	Build	Finalize creative, brief influencers, launch quiz landing page, set up tracking
3–4	Soft launch	Organic seeding, first influencer posts, small paid tests on creative
5–8	Full push	Scale paid spend behind winning creative; UGC challenge goes live in waves
9–12	Sustain	Retarget engaged users, keep organic cadence, reuse best UGC as ads

Measurement

This is a brand-affinity campaign first, so success is measured beyond last-click sales:

- Quiz completions and shade-match → add-to-bag rate
- #WearYourTruth submission volume and reach
- Branded search lift (Google Trends / Search Console)
- AOV lift from multi-shade “collect the feeling” bundles
- Sales lift in campaign period vs. trailing 8-week baseline (target: +30%)

Why This Could Plausibly Hit +30%

- Leverages equity the brand already owns, rather than inventing a new emotional angle from scratch
- Personalization (the quiz) increases purchase intent and encourages multi-shade purchases
- UGC-driven mechanics are lower-cost and higher-trust than paid media alone
- Strong gifting/bundle angle for seasonal spikes (holidays, self-care occasions)

Note: 30% is an ambitious, top-end target typically reserved for a strong seasonal or launch moment — in a real campaign this would be framed as an upper bound with a more conservative 10–15% lift as the base case.